Edifice Rebuilt on Strong Foundations

Facilities management consultancy, Edifice, has today announced its re-launch, some two years after the temporary cessation of its activities. The company's tagline – "Shaping the Future" – remains but an enhanced scope of services gives managing director Tony Angel justifiable cause for optimism.

The ranks of the fully independent consultancies within the FM sector have been increased by one, with the welcome announcement that Edifice will commence trading once again on 1st January 2006. Formerly its operations director, new MD Tony Angel is confident that success will be more sustainable second time around.

"I'm absolutely delighted to be able to speak officially about our re-launch, having worked hard behind the scenes to ensure we can hit the ground running after the New Year. I'm immensely excited at the prospect of a return to consultancy after spending a couple of years back on the supply side, and I'm totally convinced that the need for intelligent, impartial advice is greater than ever.

"When we decided to cease trading in late 2003, it was with sadness and a degree of reluctance. Circumstances at that time conspired against us, but in my own mind I always knew that the company would come back stronger than ever. As managing director, I now see my role as building for the future whilst ensuring that the foundations are solid. I think I've achieved this. Our range of services is greater than it was, and we now have the ability to provide specialisms in both private and public sectors. We have formed a close alliance with other leading independent practices in order to deliver niche solutions, and I'm thrilled to be able to look at the future with confidence as well as enthusiasm. I anticipate that 2006 will be an exciting year."

Edifice's services will be delivered through four inter-related channels: FM strategy, supply chain management, project management and technical services. Further information on the company and its capabilities can be found at www.edifice-fm.com
