Snapshot Audit Unveiled

Tony Angel, managing director of Edifice, has today unveiled the company's new product, the Snapshot Audit. Developed on order to give clients an overview of how efficiently their facilities services are being procured and managed, it provides a fast and cost effective way to formulate a facilities strategy.

Edifice has added to its already broad range of services by today unveiling its new Snapshot Audit, a high-level assessment tool suitable for client organisations in all markets and sectors. Tony Angel, Edifice managing director, explains further.

"It's an accepted principle that to manage effectively we need accurate data, and the Snapshot Audit is a tool that enables organisations to ascertain how efficiently their facilities teams and departments, or outsourced service providers, are procuring and managing services. It focuses on those areas that are key to each client, and the output can then be used to review or develop a robust facilities policy, and to set long-term strategic objectives."

The audit process is carried out for a fixed cost and the output, a detailed report with recommendations, is the consequence of both stakeholder consultation and process analysis. Further information can be found on the News and Opinion page of Edifice's website at www.edifice-fm.com
